ABSTRACT

This bibliography provides a survey of the literature on Slavic American ethnic groups. Material is included on the immigrant life experience, political and social development, and the contemporary resurgence of ethnic awareness. The first chapter cites materials on ethnicity in general, with special emphasis on Slavic groups. Chapters 2 through 5 provide references on individual Slavic groups: Croatians, Serbs, Slovenians, Czechs, Slovaks, Poles, Russians, and Ukrainians. References to books, pamphlets, periodical articles, masters theses, and doctoral dissertations are included. Attempts were made to include the works of notable scholars on each Slavic ethnic group. Brief annotations are provided for a few of the citations. (Author/AK)

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is a selective one. It attempts to provide a survey of the literature on the Slavic American ethnic groups. The bibliography includes material on the immigrant life experience, political and social development and contemporary resurgence of the ethnic awareness. The special efforts were made to include all known Master's thesis and Doctoral dissertations. Furthermore, an attempt was made to include the works of notable scholars on each Slavic ethnic group. Bibliography will provide a background for understanding the rapid developments in the Slavic American ethnic movement. This movement is growing rapidly and is becoming an integral part of the study of American ethnic phenomena.

This bibliography is arranged in the following manner: material on ethnicity in general, with special emphasis on Slavs in the U.S.A., followed by the chapter for each Slavic ethnic group in America. The chapters include: books and pamphlets as well as periodical articals. The works in other than English language are indicated by asterisks. Usually English translation of the titles have been provided. Library of Congress transliterature was used whenever necessary. Most important works are briefly annotated.
